USE YOUR VOTE

By James Willsher

VOTERS on 6 May will help shape the future of the borough, by choosing who they want to be their MP, ward councillors, and Mayor of Hackney.

Eligible residents who registered to vote before 20 April are being urged to take part in the forthcoming elections and exercise their democratic rights.

On 6 May, between 7am and 10pm, there will be 78 polling stations open at schools, community halls, and leisure centres all over Hackney, all of which are wheelchair accessible, and there will be staff on hand to assist people with voting.

Residents on the electoral register will automatically be able to vote, and should have received poll cards directing them to their nearest polling station.

Voters can also enter their postcode on the dedicated election pages of the Council's website to see who their Parliamentary, Mayoral, and ward candidates are in the forthcoming elections and where their polling station is. Residents who would like to find out more about the voting process can also watch a short explanatory film online.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Election build-up

THE regular column from the Mayor of Hackney won't be appearing in Hackney Today until after the Council, Mayoral and General Elections, which take place on 6 May. This is because of regulations governing local government publicity in the run-up to elections. The rules mean that Hackney Today will not feature or mention any elected politician or candidate during this period, unless there is a need to respond to an issue of public importance. The regular ward councillors page also cannot be featured until after the elections.

Networking nights for SMEs

SMALL to medium-sized businesses looking to break into new markets can take advantage of a networking event in Dalston. Hackney Enterprise Network, run by HBV Enterprise on behalf of the Council, is offering tailored support designed to help local entrepreneurs make contacts, enter new markets and grow their businesses. The business-to-business event will include tips on the most effective ways to fill in application forms, marketing and running a business operation.

Steve Douglas, the Council's Corporate Director of Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, said: "Small and medium-sized businesses and entrepreneurship are at the heart of Hackney's local economy."

"In these tough economic times, the Council is pleased to provide additional support to local businesses through HEN, which offers networking opportunities, funding advice, and a range of other services to increase the competitiveness of local business."

The networking event takes place from 6-8pm, on 10 May, at HBV Enterprise Centre, 34-38 Dalston Lane, E8.

Agnes shooting: man charged

A 21-year-old man has appeared in court charged with the murder of Hackney student Agnes Sina-Inakoju. Leon Dunkley, from E5, appeared at City of Westminster Magistrates' Court on 21 April, charged with the murder of 16-year-old Agnes who was shot in a Hoxton takeaway. Dunkley was also charged with possession of a firearm with intent to endanger life and was remanded in custody.

He is due to appear at the Old Bailey on 27 April.

A 16-year-old who was also arrested in connection with the shooting has been released on bail until June.

Agnes was shot through the window of Hoxton Chicken and Pizza, in Hoxton Street, on 14 April. She died two days later.

BC Radio 1's Tim Westwood stopped talking and started shovelling to inspire young people to get involved in their community.

As part of the station's 'Local Hero' campaign, the radio presenter carried out a volunteering challenge by helping out at Hackney City Farm live on air.

He spent the time looking after the animals, cleaning out mess from the donkey shed, and feeding lambs and chickens. In addition, he was set further tasks such as timed egg collecting by fellow radio presenter Fearné Cotton.

When asked about his volunteering session, Tim congratulated the young people who work at the Goldsmiths Row farm.

He said: "They are not just local heroes. They are super heroes as they do it for the love and it's a really rewarding experience."

He added: "I've just held a three-and-half week-old lamb."

"I'm one of these guys who don't pick up babies or nothing, so I was holding this little lamb, and it was resting his head, and it was bleating, and it made me feel really differently about things."

Members of the Stoke Newington Business Association, residents and guests celebrate the re-opening of Stoke Newington Church Street

By
Gracia Douglas

THERE was a carnival atmosphere when residents, businesses and visitors marked the official reopening of Stoke Newington Church Street, following major roadworks.

Bright sunshine and live calypso music greeted hundreds of shoppers who turned up to sample food and drink, and take advantage of special offers and discounts on 10 April. New pavements have helped create a safer, more co-ordinated environment for pedestrians.

Other highlights on the day included prize draw competitions; face-painting and balloons for children; plus free tours of Hackney's newly refurbished Stoke Newington Town Hall.

The event was organised by the Stoke Newington Business Association with support from the Council.

Rosanne Berry, Business Association Chair, who cut the ribbon to re-open the street, said: "It was lovely to see so many people turn up to show their support for the businesses in the Church Street, which is looking good thanks to the Council. The workmen have done a great job and kept us involved and updated throughout the project.”

The works to improve and upgrade Stoke Newington Church Street started last September following Council consultation with residents and businesses.

They are part of a significant improvement scheme that aims to regenerate the area and promote a safer environment for residents, businesses and visitors.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Take the stage at Lovebox

YOUNG musicians from Hackney could be billed alongside Roxy Music, Grace Jones and Dizzee Rascal at this year's Lovebox festival.

PTriple, a Dalston-based community project, has secured a 45-minute slot at the July event for young people who attend its new 10-week music production course.

The free course will see young musicians tutored in studio technology and production, as well as providing advice on improving writing and performance skills. Participants will be encouraged to write their own material to perform on stage at the festival in Victoria Park from 16 to 18 July.

The course starts on 4 May, from 5-8pm, at Haggerston Community Centre, 179 Haggerston Road.

No pre-registration is required, but anyone interested in taking part must attend the first session.

For more info, contact Haggerston Community Centre on: 020 7254 2312, or call PTriple on: 07878 555 279.

Beach volleyball will be served up at Shoreditch Park

Join in the beach frolics

THE sun is finally shining and the London Beach Volleyball Club (LBVC) is planning to start a league in Shoreditch Park to take advantage of the balmy evenings.

Registration opened this month on the LBVC website. The league's structure will be decided once interest and feedback has been measured.

LBVC was created in 2006 to coordinate the use of the park's sand volleyball court – the first in London.

The Club is active from around May to September, with regular weeknight and weekend sessions for various skill levels. Players can e-mail LBVC directly to book the court and club members can hire equipment.

Hackney Council works with LBVC to improve the sport's facilities in the borough. For more info, visit:

Don't miss the chance on 6 May to vote for a Mayor of Hackney and local councillors – as well as voting in the General Election

Electing local councillors

You are voting for councillors for your local area, or 'ward'.

There are 19 wards within Hackney, each represented by three councillors.

This means that residents can vote for up to three candidates.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They also hold drop-in advice surgeries for residents.

Electing a Mayor of Hackney

You are voting to elect a Mayor to lead the Council.

Hackney is one of only a few councils in the UK that have a directly elected Mayor who works with a Cabinet of elected councillors to oversee the budget and all Council services.

Electing an MP

You are voting for a Member of Parliament (MP).

You live in one of two constituencies: Hackney North & Stoke Newington, or Hackney South & Shoreditch.

The elected MP for each area will represent their constituents in Parliament.

MPs from across the UK make up the House of Commons at Parliament.

Here laws and other major decisions affecting the country are debated and voted upon.

Election time

By
James Willsher

FOR the first time voters can decide who they want to be their MP, ward councillors and Mayor of Hackney, all on the same day.

To help voters through the process, a short film can be viewed on the Council's website. It explains the three different elections that residents can vote in, taking people through the whole process, from receiving a poll card in the post, visiting a polling station on 6 May, and voting using three different ballot papers.

Voters who applied before 20 April to use a postal vote, should return them in the first class envelope provided as soon as possible. Postal votes received after 10pm on 6 May will not be counted.

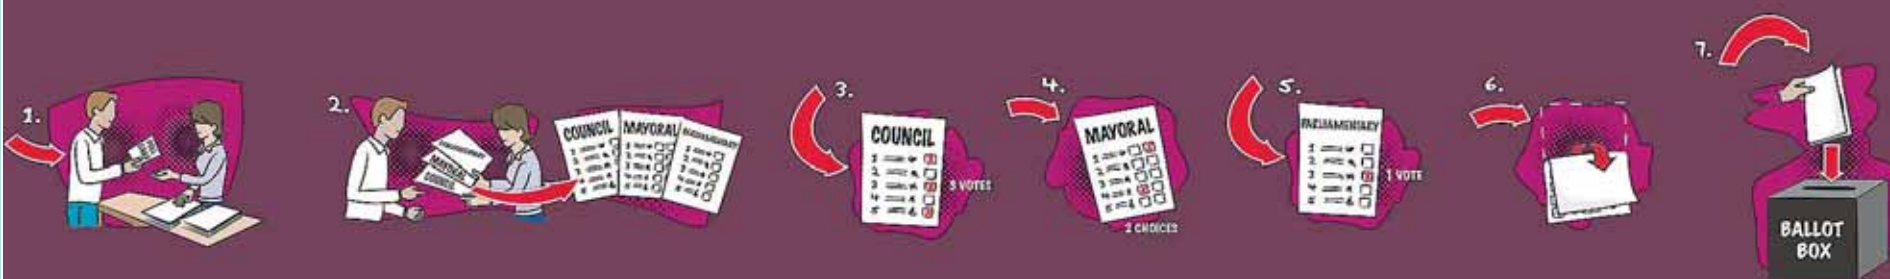

After polling stations close at 10pm, votes in the three elections will be verified before counting begins. The results of Hackney's Parliamentary ballots are expected to be declared early on 7 May, with the results of the Council and Mayoral elections due later in the day. All the results will be posted on the Council's website as they come in.

Farewell after 36 years at school

Left to right: Former school governor Philippa Toomey, headteacher Katherine Hartigan & head cleaner Marilyn Andrews

By
Marcel Reinard

A CARDINAL Pole Catholic School cleaner, who has worked with four head teachers and 28,000 pupils during 36 years of loyal service, has retired.

Head cleaner Marilyn Andrews was treated to a farewell celebration on 29 March by staff and pupils who wanted to say thank you as she began her retirement. She shared the evening with Philippa Toomey, a governor who has also left the E9 school after more than 30 years.

Marilyn said: "It was a lovely presentation and I didn't expect so many people to be there."

"The school has really changed over my 36 years and for the better. It's like one big family there and everyone is supportive – from the caretaker all the way to the headmistress."

Headteacher Katherine Hartigan said Marilyn had been a great supporter of the school 'and we will miss her cheery presence'.

She added: "Philippa has been a tremendous support, offering good advice and wise counsel."

The event preceded a celebration of achievement night for Year Seven, Eight and Nine pupils with music, poetry and drama performances from Macbeth and The Tempest. Sarah Lamin and Shani Glover were singled out for their achievements, winning prizes in science and technology, respectively.

Cardinal Pole is due to move to a new state-of-the-art school on a single site, in Morning Lane, E9, by September 2012. This is part of Hackney's Building Schools for the Future

“The school has really changed over my 36 years and for the better. It's like one big family”

(BSF) programme, which aims to provide top class learning facilities for nearly 7,000 pupils across the borough by 2015.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Timely advice for residents

FOR those of us who have never quite mastered keeping potted plants alive, and others that can't tell their Firefoxes from their firewalls, help could finally be at hand.

Moreover, it could be by learning from each other.

A 'Time Bank' scheme has been launched in Hackney, which allows residents to volunteer their time by sharing their skills with others.

In return, participants receive help in activities they may struggle with, ranging from dog walking and gardening, to English lessons and digital photography.

A launch event at Hackney Wick Community Centre on 27 March, attracted more than 70 people.

Visitors got the chance to learn a new skill at workshops in herb planting, digital photography, bike safety and henna tattoo design.

Steve Thomas, Regional Housing Director at housing association Family Mosaic, which runs the scheme, said:

"We have high hopes for this project creating real opportunities for people to make a difference in their local community and receive much needed help themselves."

One Family Mosaic tenant, who enjoyed the herb planting, said: "Now I have been taught how to grow herbs properly and I can't wait to use them in my cooking."

He added: "The day allowed me to meet new people from my area and I can't wait to start volunteering."

Hackney Marshes to get cash boost

THE home of grassroots football is to get £500,000 to improve facilities.

The Council received the funds from the London Marathon Charitable Trust, to contribute towards a multi-million pound scheme to redevelop Hackney Marshes, which has the largest concentration of 11-a-side football pitches in Europe.

As well as plans for new cricket and rugby pitches, the

Hackney Marshes has the largest concentration of football pitches in Europe

five-year project will create improved football pitches; new changing rooms; better walking, cycling and jogging routes; a cafe and classrooms; and environmental enhancements around the nearby River Lea. The Trust's grant will go towards a sports pavilion and changing rooms at the North Marsh.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director for Community Services, said: "This is a key part of our investment programme which is using the London 2012 Games as an opportunity to give our residents world-class sports facilities alongside the new venues being built at the Olympic Park."

Grazebrook pupils try out activities and (below right) members of the Beijing delegation examine a workbook in which the children record their progress

By
Ruth Garland

BUDDING athletes impressed an international audience when a delegation from Beijing dropped in on Grazebrook School's Personal Bests training session.

The group was visiting Hackney from Haidian, the Chinese borough that hosted the Media Centres for the 2008 Olympic and Paralympic Games. (Construction of the 2012 media centres at the Olympic Park site in Hackney is currently nearing completion.)

Grazebrook, in N16, is one of 40 Hackney primary schools participating in the borough's 2012-inspired Personal Bests athletics programme. Each pupil who takes part receives three physical activity sessions, and one lesson from Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp.

The schools also have the option to run weekly after-school clubs, and customised kit is provided.

The aim of the programme is to encourage as many children as possible to achieve their own personal bests, and to become aware of how important diet and exercise are for good health.

Five special schools are involved this year, as well as Simon Marks

Jewish School and independent Muslim school, Tawid School for Boys, which is taking part for the first time.

The programme is aimed at children aged nine to 11. Each young athlete measures their baseline performance in seven Olympic sports – javelin, long jump, triple jump, shot put, discus, speed bounce and relays – and records their improvement in individual workbooks.

Each school will then send the six boys and six girls who have shown the most improvement to the borough finals.

The Personal Bests Finals take place at Hackney Downs on 7 July.

Residents now have better access to the Tube thanks to the East London line extension and four new stations

KEY FACT

It is predicted that 33 million people will use the extended East London line in 2011

By
Emma Britton

AS residents eagerly anticipate the opening of four new London Overground stations in the borough, Hackney Today was given a sneak preview of the service.

Trains were running through Shoreditch High Street, Hoxton, Haggerston and Dalston Junction for final testing and we were shown on board to experience the extended East London line.

Newly-trained staff guided us through the stations, as the finishing touches were being made, and onto modern four-car trains which have air conditioning, wheelchair bays and more space than the previous fleet.

Drivers have been training on the route for six months and are looking forward to doing the job for real, with an initial service of eight trains an hour from Dalston Junction to New Cross Gate expected to begin running imminently.

A full service of 12 trains an hour is planned to run through that section from 23 May. At New Cross Gate, it will split with four trains an hour running further south to West Croydon, Crystal Palace and New Cross.

Transport for London will extend the line north to Highbury and Islington by spring 2011 and further south to Clapham by 2012, with an intended 16 trains an hour running through the borough by that time – equivalent to Tube frequency.

Following a smooth journey through the borough, we ended our guided tour at Dalston Junction, where we were struck by the sheer scale of the station, with four platforms and a spacious ticket hall made up of stainless steel panelling.

With the £1.4billion upgrade almost complete, it appears Hackney is on track for faster, more comfortable travel.

HACKNEY is famously the 'world's borough', and a short walk along any high street will show you a global contribution to its thriving and diverse local economy.

For nearly a quarter of a century, Algin Saydar has been working behind the scenes to create better services for residents, and to help those in need to access them.

Originally from Istanbul, Turkey, she came to London in 1979 and while a student, began working for the BBC Turkish service during the early 1980s, putting together radio news broadcasts and programmes.

In 1986, Algin started work for Hackney Council, in the newly established Women's Unit, and helped produce the country's first guidelines on how authorities should tackle domestic violence. They were launched at the House of Commons with veteran campaigner Claire Rayner, and the British Library requested a copy.

Algin began working part-time for a Shoreditch charity named Health Advocacy and Counselling Services for Turkish-speaking Communities, while at the same time starting a part-time job at City and Hackney Primary Care Trust in 1997. She paired volunteer mothers with young, pregnant Kurdish, Turkish and Turkish-Cypriot women who had no relatives in this country, to provide support and advice.

“Hackney has always welcomed people, wherever they are from”

The charity later changed its name to Derman, and Algin was appointed its director in 2000. It had been set up in the early 1990s to ensure the thousands of Kurdish and Turkish residents on its books could access NHS services; that they were receiving the support they were entitled to; and to provide an insight for health professionals into these communities and their perceptions of illnesses and medical issues.

“Hackney has always welcomed people, wherever they are from,” Algin said, adding that she is absolutely passionate about enabling Kurdish, Turkish and Turkish-Cypriot residents to access local services.

Before retiring in 2009, Algin played an active role in Team Hackney, the borough's partnership with local voluntary sector services. She was one of six representatives on the Children and Young People's Partnership Board, while also chairing the borough's Children and Young People's Providers Forum.

She said: “I think partnership between the statutory and voluntary sectors is partly being in tune with and really caring about the borough, and partly being committed to making things better – it's shouldering something together that can't be done alone.”

During her time in Hackney, Algin has seen quite a few changes over the past few decades, not least how some relatively new arrivals have made their own contribution to the borough.

She said: “I think the Kurdish and Turkish communities have enlivened the economy of Hackney. I remember Kingsland High Street and Stoke Newington High Street in the 1980s, it was very different to what it is now.

“Hackney's become a more vibrant and exciting place. Communities who have not necessarily come from this country have put a heck of a lot into it.”

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: Plastic bags are often left tied around the handles of the recycling bins on my estate. I understand that people may be unsure if they can be recycled or not, but they look unsightly and encourage litter to be dropped next to the bins. What is the Council doing to ensure this stops?

A: There is no need to tie plastic bags to bin handles as they can be recycled along with other materials. Residents can place items inside plastic bags and put them straight into the bins, or drop the bag in after they have emptied out their recycling.

Collection crews will do this if they find any tied to the bin.

If you notice this happening on your estate call: 020 8356 6688.

Resident Jennifer Marsend was delighted with the new all-in-one recycling bins that are currently being tested in the borough

On-the-go recycling

By Marcel Reinard

NEW all-in-one recycling bins have been installed in three areas of the borough.

The Council has begun introducing new bins that will collect plastic bottles, newspapers, glass, cans and cartons in one end and general waste in the other.

The multipurpose bins are currently being tested in Hackney Central, Stoke Newington and Shoreditch.

If they prove popular, the aim is to use them in busy streets across the borough to make it easier for people to recycle when they are away from home.

Resident, Jennifer Marsend, said she welcomed the scheme, adding: "It's easy to use and very nice looking."

I hope it makes a difference to people's recycling in Hackney. They're lovely bins."

Steve Douglas, Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, said: "We know that over half the rubbish that goes into our litter bins is recyclable. By providing these new bins we are delivering on our commitment to support residents to keep as much waste as possible away from landfill sites, and continue to help make Hackney a cleaner and greener borough."

Modern art really is rubbish

A STUDENT showcase of art made with recyclable materials offered residents a chance to think differently about waste.

The 'I'm Not Wasted' multi-arts event, held at the Hothouse near London Fields, was organised by London South Bank University arts management students. They aimed to show how high-quality art can be produced from discarded materials.

The students ensured that green ideals were incorporated into the delivery of the event on 23 March, even sourcing an award-winning eco-friendly location.

Resident Annalisa Zanuttini said: "My friends and I had a great time.

The event had a real buzz and, with its wide range of creations, changed the way I look at 'garbage' and inspired me to be creative with things I mechanically throw away every day."

Artists demonstrated their work in the form of fine art, fashion, photography and jewellery. The Council's recycling team was also on hand to provide residents and visitors with advice on how to reduce waste and recycle as much as possible.

Discover gardening secrets

TEACHERS looking to set up or revamp a school garden with pupils' help can now sign-up for a new course.

Gardening With Children will cover subjects including seed sowing, food growing, composting, planting, and organic gardening.

As well as learning the basics, staff can offer tips about how to engage children, things to think about during term times and how to cope with small fingers.

The six-week course at St Mary's Secret Garden, Pearson Street, E2, begins on Monday, 10 May. Lessons run from 4pm to 6.30pm, until 21 June, with a break for half term.

The course will give teachers the chance to learn how to interest children in gardening

The course costs £200.

St Mary's also offers a wide range of services including volunteering opportunities and courses for adults with learning difficulties; free art classes; and an after-school club for children aged eight to 12.

Fantastic voyage

Courtney Wooley (left) and Christy Ilesamni from Skinner's Company's School for Girls took part in a five-day voyage through the Solent

By
Marcel Reinard

TWO Skinners' Company's School for Girls students have completed a five-day voyage as crewmates aboard an ocean-going yacht.

Courtney Wooley and Christy Ilesamni, both 15, joined the Sailing Academy run by charity the Tall Ships Youth Trust (TSYT) for a round trip from Portsmouth, via the Solent, off the South Coast.

During the voyage, from 15 to 19 April, the teenagers learnt how to set and stow the sails, haul ropes and steer the yacht, as well as develop skills in teamwork, communication, problem solving and leadership.

The girls also completed their Royal Yachting Association (RYA) Competent Crew qualification, the first step on the RYA yacht training scheme, with Courtney picking up the award for most improved crew member.

She said: "I would love to come back again. I enjoyed learning to sail a Challenger yacht and would really like to try sailing again in the future. Overall though, I am very proud of my achievements this week."

Paul Sinclair, from sponsor HSBC's Global Education Trust, said: "We are supporting these sailing academies because we want to make a positive difference in the communities in which we operate. We have seen how sailing can be such an inspirational experience outside the classroom, and the academies will develop important life skills that young people can take back into their community, school or job."

World kayaking champion Anna Hemmings advises Stoke Newington pupils during the trade competition

Lean on me

PUPILS from six Hackney primaries got an insight into secondary school life – in the unlikely surroundings of an Essex forest.

Twenty four youngsters took part in numeracy and literacy workshops, plus outdoor activities like walking the low wire, as part of the Move Up Mentoring scheme, which helps young people make a smooth transition to secondary school.

The event at Gilwell Park Scout Activity Centre, near Epping Forest, on 8 and 9 April, was designed as a get to know you session for mentors and mentees. The mentors, aged 18 to 24, are studying at local sixth form colleges or universities.

They will now meet with their mentees once a week, until the end of summer term, to focus on the subject areas which the young people need most help with, concentrating on maths, reading and writing.

BSix College's Dominique Adamson, who will be mentoring Roxania Thomas-Rattray before she starts at Skinners' Academy, said: "Roxy wants help with literacy as she says she doesn't like writing. She is excited by the prospect of going to Skinners' and having a mentor to help her."

The scheme is funded by Team Hackney and The Learning Trust, and organised by Inspire! Hackney's education business partnership.

Jada Tuit, 11, from Harrington Hill Primary School with Byrny Maudsley, 19, a London College of Fashion student

The business of the Games

A BUSINESS enterprise competition gave N16 pupils an initiation into public speaking.

Stoke Newington School students took on the roles of entrepreneurs in a London 2012-based competition, which asked them to develop a plan for a fictional pre-Games training camp for competitors. Each team focused on a field – such as athletics or water sports – and presented pitches that covered everything from design to budget.

The pitches were judged by a panel that included six-time world kayaking champion, Anna Hemmings. Head of PE, Tom Phillips, said: "A lot of pupils had never stood up, presented or promoted something before, but they all showed real enthusiasm that continued throughout the event."

The winners were Team H20 Aberdeen – Millie, Savannah, Mia and Molly, all 13 – for their aquatics venue idea. They will represent the school in a national competition later this year. The event on 26 March was organised by the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games.

Competition

Win tickets to Iram at the Barbican

ONE of Israel's leading theatre companies, dynamic Herzliya Ensemble comes to London with a powerful piece about a small Jewish community, based on the short stories of Yiddish author and playwright Sholem Aleichem. Through picturesque surrealism and dark irony, the imaginary town of Kasrilevke is brought to life. Director Ofira Henig uses dreamlike caricatures and a highly visual style to examine ideas around memory, and the burning desire to rediscover a forcefully erased past. The play uses humour to confront issues of displacement, exile and bereavement. Iram is performed in Hebrew with English subtitles.

For more info visit: www.barbican.org.uk

For your chance to win a pair of tickets for the opening night on 19 May, send a postcard to Iram competition, Hackney Today, Communications, Room 82, Town Hall, Mare Street, E8 1EA; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12pm, 3 May. Submissions must include an address and contact telephone number. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

REVIEW*Still a wonderful thingBy Marcel Reinhard*Kid Creole*Barbican, Silk Street, EC2, 23 April

WATCHING August Darnell – aka Kid Creole – on stage it's difficult not to feel a little old. After more than 30 years in the business, the man still moves with more fluidity than people half his age – this reviewer included. Bashing out hit after hit – Stool Pigeon and It's A Wonderful Thing are just two of the best – with theatrical passion with the horn section, bongos and wah-wah guitar, it felt like they were being performed for the first time, a testament both to Kid Creole's professionalism and talent. Attending as part of the La Linea Latin Music festival, the Barbican's capacity crowd more than played their part too. By the time seminal hit 'Annie, I'm Not Your Daddy' comes on, some fans were making a dash to the stage to jump with Kid while the other 2,000 dance in unison.

The Coconuts were the only blemish on an otherwise faultless evening.

It's too easy to apply a whole number of bad puns – besides, my favourite was my companion's 'dessicated' – but they lacked the vocal talent to reproduce some of the Kid's female-led numbers.

And whether, in hindsight, Barbican will rethink a performer that brings together such a crowd – old soul boys and girls, divas and young disco-verers – partying into the night for a further two hours with DJs Horse Meat Disco is another matter entirely.

Chances are there were a few feeling a bit sore the next morning; but the way Kid Creole has taken care of himself over the years, he probably wasn't one of them.

Step into the Vortex

By Marcel Reinard

Vortex Outdoors, Gillette Square, N16,
Sunday 9 May, 1-7pm, Free

WITH the first flashes of summer sun, despite temperatures suggesting otherwise, some have already become excited about the festival season. But just in case carrying camping equipment up and down hills and overflowing toilets are not for you, Hackney is offering an alternative: Vortex Outdoors.

Supported by Hackney Council, the event will bring together jazz, reggae, soul, funk and hip hop artists in a laid-back, free open air music festival in Gillette Square.

Artists performing include Done-e, Zarif, Jamie Woon, Elisabeth Troy, Aruba Red, Kevin Mark Trail, Last Mango in Paris, The Liferforce Band and students from the surrounding area, including BSix Sixth form college.

Festival organisers expect to see an increase to the 1,500 audience seen in its first year in 2008 due to its diverse line up. As well as listening to performers outside the popular Vortex Jazz Bar venue, there will also be sustainability activities, a film installation and bicycle maintenance advice.

Taking centre stage

Pupils, as well as parents and staff (right), from South Hackney schools showcase their talents at Bridge Academy

By
Marcel Reinard

PUPILS from 11 South Hackney schools took to the stage for an evening of song and dance as part of a drive to get more involved with the local community.

A 450-strong audience of family and friends gathered at Bridge Academy, E2, to watch 190 students from Burbage, De Beauvoir, Our Lady and St Joseph's, Randal Cremer, Sebright, St John the Baptist, St

Monica's, Whitmore, and Queensbridge primary schools, Haggerston School and Bridge Academy present a 'musical extravaganza'. The event on 25 March drew inspiration from The Lion King, Sister Act, Grease, Thriller, Fame, West Side Story and The Sound of Music. Bridge Academy Assistant Principal, Lesley Hamilton, said: "The performance allowed those involved to showcase what they have achieved, while at the same time, it provided an excellent opportunity for schools to work together."

The performance was part of The Learning Trust's community cohesion agenda of bringing local people together to celebrate the work of the area's schools.

Etta Bell, one of the organisers from dance and yoga academy Kickstep Wellbeing, said: "It is so inspiring to see each child develop in ability throughout the term. The disciplines they learn improve fitness, creativity, teamwork and confidence. All the children bloom at the performance."

The pupils will now have the opportunity to see a West End show during the autumn term.

Making their amends

By Gracia Douglas

MAGISTRATES attended a Hackney Youth Offending Team (YOT) open day to see first hand some of the community work carried out by young offenders.

Guests from Thames Magistrates' Court learnt more about the activities of the Youth Referral Order Panel, which works with first time offenders, and is chaired by members of the community who decide what rehabilitative work the young people should undertake for three to 12-month periods.

Magistrates saw young people gardening and building a play house.

A representative from charity Macmillan Cancer Support was then presented with cheques worth more than £500. The money was raised by young people who sold vegetables they had grown and items they had made in workshops as part of their reparation work for the community. David Gerhad, from Macmillan Cancer Support, said: "This money will provide three days care for terminally ill patients. It is warming to think young people doing reparation have happily worked to this end, knowing their efforts will support people who will really benefit from this."

Pupils get a taste of careers

STUDENTS got a taste of the job prospects in health care, during a careers day at Homerton hospital.

The Aim Higher Health Careers Day on 19 March presented a range of career paths in the health sector – other than becoming a doctor or nurse – to encourage Year 9 pupils from Clapton Girls Technology College, Stoke Newington, Cardinal Pole, and Hackney Free & Parochial schools to extend their studies after the age of 16.

Workshops were run by health professionals including dieticians, speech and language therapists, radiologists and audiologists to help the students choose GCSE subjects. There was also the chance to get involved in role-play, such as feeding a patient with swallowing difficulties and dressing those with limited mobility.

Esra Akdag, 14, said: “I found the day funny in parts, but really interesting. I haven’t quite decided what I want to do yet, but I think it will probably be a Diploma in Society, Health and Development.”

The event was organised by Hackney’s education business partnership Inspire!, in association with the Aim Higher Partnership, The Learning Trust and Homerton University Hospital NHS Foundation Trust.

Relocation of services

By Marcel Reinard

SERVICES at St Leonard’s Hospital have started relocating ahead of construction of a new health centre on the Hoxton site.

Staff at the NHS City and Hackney’s headquarters began moving to new homes this month, so work could begin on the South West Primary Care Resource Centre – one of four new health hubs.

The physiotherapy department will operate from 52B Well Street, E9, from 4 May. Community sexual health services, currently at The Ivy Centre, are moving to Shepherdess Walk, N1, in late May. Both services are due to be permanently based in the new centre when it opens in 2012.

The foot health and community dentistry departments will remain at St Leonard’s until next year, when they are set to move to another new building – the South East Primary Care Resource Centre, in Kenworthy Road, E9.

NHS City and Hackney Chief Executive, Jacqui Harvey, said: “The centre is part of our strategy to bring care closer to home for people in our area.

“We appreciate these changes will affect patients using services at St Leonard’s.

“We are communicating to patients through a programme of publicity and advertising, letters and face-to-face contact. Patients can be assured they will receive the same high level of service at these new locations, which are also well serviced by public transport routes.”

The red brick St Leonard’s Hospital building is in a conservation area and its iconic facade on Kingsland Road will be preserved during the redevelopment.

First of its kind

RESIDENTS in the North East of the borough can now access extended after hours services, thanks to Hackney’s newest health centre.

The Springfield GP-led Health Centre, which opened on 29 March, is the first of its kind in the borough. Open seven days a week, from 8am to 8pm, the centre in Oldhill Street, N16, offers a walk-in service so patients can avoid going to hospital for injuries or illnesses which are not life-threatening.

GP appointments and walk-in services are available to all, including visitors to Hackney, or people who are not registered with a GP, provided they are eligible for NHS services.

Patients who cannot book a GP’s appointment because of work or other commitments can still take advantage of childhood vaccinations, seasonal flu immunisations, emergency contraception, sexual health advice and stop smoking clinics.

Terilla Bernard, Deputy Director of Primary Care Commissioning at NHS City and Hackney, said: “We are excited about the new GP-led health centre, and the benefits it will offer to patients in the North East of Hackney. There is a drive to increase access to primary care across England, and the centre is an example of NHS City and Hackney’s commitment to this at a local level.”

The clinic’s services are delivered under NHS City and Hackney, but run by independent healthcare provider, The Lawson Practice. The centre, which is built on the site of the former Oldhill Practice, will continue to treat former patients.

Movie mania

1: A King Kong publicity stunt on a rooftop opposite the Rio; 2: queuing outside the cinema; 3: the building in 1915; 4: present day; 5: a drawing from 1985

By Elizabeth Green,
Access and Outreach Officer

Films, in some form or another, have been shown at the Dalston site of today's Rio Cinema for just over 100 years.

The earliest record of a fledgling cinema is an application in 1909 to build an extension to the premises at 105 Kingsland High Street to house a 'cinematograph machine chamber'.

The proprietor was Clara Ludski, who started showing 'animated pictures' at the auction house she ran in the building. Animated pictures were a precursor to cinema theatre. They were first shown in fairgrounds, village halls and converted shops from 1907 onwards.

On 14 May 1914, a further application was made to construct a new cinematograph theatre, incorporating the two adjacent sites of 103 and 107 Kingsland High Street, designed by Adams and Coles Architects.

The Kingsland Empire opened on 29 April 1915, with a seating capacity of over 900. It was an impressive building with a hexagonal tower over the front entrance and was decorated in Grecian style. It included a tea room and gallery. There was also a music enclosure in front of the screen for the small orchestras that accompanied the films.

In the 1930s, ownership of the Kingsland Empire Ltd changed hands a number of times, before being bought by Capital and Provincial News Theatres in 1936.

The building was extensively reconstructed and redesigned by renowned cinema architect Frederick Bromige.

It re-opened as The Classic on 18 December, 1937, with 561 seats. At the opening ceremony, the then Mayor of Hackney expressed his satisfaction that 'approximately 75 per cent of the men employed on the building were local residents'. The new picture palace was also praised for having the latest technology.

As part of the Classic chain, the cinema was subject to all the company's various attempts to attract audiences. In the 1950s, it changed its name from the The Classic Cartoon Cinema, to the The Classic Continental, and back to The Classic all within the space of 12 months.

It even operated for a time as a cinema club, which entitled it to show uncensored films. The Tatler Cinema Club opened on 3 May 1970, but had ceased to operate by 1975, reverting to regular screenings under the name The Classic.

On 9 April 1976, it was re-born once again, this time as the Rio Cinema. The sub-lease to the cinema had been bought by businessman Paul Theodorou.

However, it did not prove to be a profitable venture, and he sold the lease in 1977. After a short period as a community centre and vigorous attempts to secure funding, the Rio re-opened in 1979. It was to operate as an independent community cinema. In February 1984, when The Ace in Stoke Newington closed, the Rio became the borough's only cinema, which it remains today.

It continues to show both mainstream and arthouse films, has screenings for parents and young children, and hosts events such as the Turkish and Kurdish Film Festival.

Job vacancies

Neighbourhoods & Regeneration

Markets Inspector

£27,945 - £29,571

Two positions: full or part-time pro rata

Apply by: 4 May

You will help keep our street markets, safe, clean and efficient.

Markets are an important part of Hackney's vibrant street life.

You will ensure that they operate within the law, that all regulations about waste disposal are followed and that licence requirements are met.

Good communication is key with Council officers, stallholders, traders and members of the public.

You will need a thorough knowledge of legislation relating to markets and street trading, and the ability to establish effective monitoring systems to ensure enforcement.

As part of our team, you will monitor the activities of traders and deal with any illegal trading activity, including removing fly pitchers and taking action against traders selling counterfeit goods.

Where there are serious breaches of legislation or licence conditions, you will prepare reports and attend court to act as a witness for the borough.

You will be someone who can manage conflicting priorities in a calm and focused way, along with commanding respect and confidence from colleagues and service users. Some flexibility over working patterns is essential.

Community Services

Homelessness Assessment Assistant

£25,515 - £27,009

Apply by: 6 May

This is an excellent opportunity for someone with strong administration skills to support our homelessness services.

You will assist homelessness caseworkers and officers, as well as collect and collate information for the production of key performance indicators and reports.

Able to work to tight deadlines, you will have excellent information gathering and communication skills and experience of balancing priorities.

Your role will involve making basic enquires to assist the assessment process as well as taking notes and minutes at meetings, preparing, copying, circulating papers, dealing with telephone callers and referring complex issues to the appropriate officer.

We're looking for someone with the ability to address sensitive matters and maintain confidentiality. IT literacy with the ability to pick up new systems quickly is essential.

Medical Adviser

£32,532 - £35,055

Apply by: 4 May

You will play a key role in assessing applicants seeking re-housing due to medical grounds, and advising on whether priority homeless applicants are vulnerable. You will then allocate these applicants to adapted or specially built social housing stock.

We are looking for someone with experience of working across diverse client groups, including the elderly, the young and those with learning difficulties and mental illness, together with working knowledge of the types of housing that are suitable for people with disabilities.

You will work closely with housing, health and social services to develop policies that meet the housing needs of people with medical problems and disabilities, using your sound understanding of the needs of applicants to inform the discussion.

Committed to the Council's equal opportunities policies and aware of the problems facing applicants, you will have a proven track record of working effectively with a broad range of professionals in housing, health, and social services. Good organisation, prioritisation and communication skills are essential.

Senior Customer Service Officer

£30,345 - £31,935

Apply by: 4 May

You will be responsible for the delivery of frontline services, including supervising staff, providing a diagnostic service and overseeing the provision of information relevant to service enquiries.

We are looking for a positive self-starter and team player with knowledge of housing and homelessness legislation, together with a sound awareness of the importance of customer care.

We will look to ensure that customer service cover is provided at all times, that reception staff are professional, well informed and responsible, and that the Council's IT systems are effectively utilised.

Strong on interviewing, negotiation and writing, you will have a proven track record of managing and developing a team. An understanding of a range of systems is essential.

Job Profile

Adedoyin Awomosu

Deputy Head of Services for Parking & Markets/Street Trading, talks about the role of Markets Inspector

What are the main responsibilities?

You will ensure the safe and efficient running of the market, developing positive working relationships with traders and assisting them, especially at critical opening and closing times. You will also deal with any illegal trading activity or breaches of regulations, which may entail verbal and written warnings, issuing fixed penalty notices or prosecutions. Long term, you will work with the Council, market traders and other retailers to maximise the trading potential and shopping experience of each market.

In what ways is the role challenging?

While the job is interesting, it is also demanding and requires an eye for detail. You will need to understand and practically apply legislation relating to all forms of street trading. In addition, you will respond to real-time situations in a controlled and appropriate manner, and successfully take appropriate action to resolve problems. You will also liaise between traders and third parties to solve disputes.

How is the job rewarding?

It's a great opportunity to develop positive and effective working relations with lots of interesting people from diverse cultures within Hackney, and to do a job that will help traders and ensure markets are enjoyable experiences for residents. Your role in monitoring food safety and trading standards will also help protect Hackney residents. This also ties in with the regeneration of markets in the approach to the 2012 Olympics and Paralympics and the growth of the local economy.

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Water House – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.

Chef Ben Spice is ready to put the winter well and truly behind him. He said: "Spring is here and whatever anyone likes to say about Christmas, now is the real season to be jolly. This recipe captures what I really love about spring – beautiful, fresh vegetables bursting out everywhere."

"The base of this dish is a nice, fresh vegetable stock. Great stocks are at the heart of so much of what's really delicious in many restaurant kitchens – everything from risottos to a simple braised asparagus are at their best when made with a really delicious stock."

Spring broth

Serves two

Preparation time
Overnight

Cooking
15 mins

Ingredients for veg stock

- 500ml water
- 4 medium carrots
- 3 medium onions
- 1 small garlic bulb
- 1 leek
- ½ celery head
- 5 bay leaves
- Generous tbs of fennel seeds.
- 3 fresh tomatoes – chopped
- 150g of pulses such as cannellini or kidney
- 150g new potatoes – chopped
- A generous handful of wild garlic
- Use a range of spring herbs such as mint, basil, lemon balm, borage, oregano and parsley.

Top tips

- The most important thing to remember about this dish is to use fresh, seasonal ingredients. Everyone loves a hearty wintry stew, but there is no substitute for a true taste of spring.

Method

- Chop and dice the carrot, onion, garlic, leek and celery. Cover the vegetables with cold water and bring to the boil quickly. Once brought to the boil, immediately turn down to a very low heat for approximately 5 mins. Throw in herb stalks. If time allows let stock infuse overnight. Then remove veg and it's ready to use.

From stock to broth

- Take 500ml of stock, bring it to the boil and add the spring vegetables you require. The following vegetables have just come into season and make a delicious addition to this broth. Alternatively, throw in any spring vegetable you like
- 150g purple sprouting broccoli
- 6 asparagus spears - chopped

Water House is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area.

Air your views

VIEWS are being sought on a draft air quality strategy for London that aims to reduce carbon emissions and tackle pollution. Over the last few years, a number of measures have been introduced to help improve air quality in London.

However, air pollution remains a problem in the capital – European Union targets for air quality standards that were intended to be met in 2004 and 2005 have still not been achieved.

The Greater London Authority has identified a number of actions that could help to improve air quality in local areas, and is considering testing these measures in parts of London. To have your say on how effective you think these would be at tackling poor air quality, take a few minutes to complete a questionnaire.

How could the air quality in London be improved?

The consultation runs until 21 June, and the final strategy is expected to be published later in 2010.

To take part in the online questionnaire visit: www.london.gov.uk/air-quality. To request paper versions of the questionnaires, or the draft strategy, call: 020 7983 4100; e-mail: maqs@london.gov.uk

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

KEEPING IT CLEAN

Darren Attreed, Area Environmental Manager

WORKING his way up from street sweeper, Darren is an example of what can be achieved during a career in Waste Services.

He manages a team of between 60 to 80 street cleansing staff at Millfields Waste Depot. Having worked in a number of roles – including refuse driver – before his current position, Darren is keen to nurture staff and see them, and the Council, benefit from investments in training and development. He also works with local businesses, dealing with and resolving operational issues. He said: "No two days are the same; dealing with logistics and staff is never mundane and there are constant challenges."

"I enjoy getting the results that help to make the borough look clean for people. For me, it's good to set out the strategies to make it happen, then go out there to get feedback from customers and staff and make sure that what has been put in place is working for everyone."

The Commercial Waste team has recently introduced cardboard recycling for businesses removed and can use either the Council or a private contractor to do this.

Hackney's Commercial Waste Team is broken down into four operational areas to cover the whole borough. It offers a variety of collection contracts, and different types of containers at competitive prices, plus a collection frequency to suit the requirements of local businesses.

They also collect items for re-use and commercial recycling, which include mixed glass recycling, a service which has proved very popular with bars, pubs and restaurants across the borough.

The team works closely with the Council's Environmental Enforcement Team to support and advise businesses about the correct way to dispose of their waste. In April, the Commercial Waste team also introduced cardboard recycling for businesses to their range of services.

Alternative access to Hackney substation - consultation update

National Grid is keen to understand the genuine views of the community and we will continue to work with you and your local representatives to see if we can find an alternative access to our substation which has minimal impact on the area.

Following the public exhibition on 4 March, and ongoing discussions with community representatives and individuals, we have received some very useful feedback. To give people additional time to consider the proposals, to review the feedback received to date and to have the opportunity to provide further comment we will continue to accept further feedback beyond the previous 6 April deadline and will be holding a second event in May. We will confirm details as soon as possible.

If you would like a copy of the information pack and feedback form please contact National Grid's community relations team on 0800 731 7645 or alternatively email info@communityrelations.co.uk.
